

Northline presentation system

Fifteen reusable layouts. Eight business-review examples. Editable charts, tables and diagrams.

Start with the right structure

Open Northline_Reusable_Template.potx to create a working presentation. Keep the original template as your clean reference. The template includes fifteen layout examples. Delete example slides that are not needed.

Select Home, New Slide and the layout that best matches the message. Enter content in the matching placeholders. Use Layout to change the structure and Reset to restore the intended placeholder geometry.

One slide, one business point

Write the main conclusion as the heading. Use supporting numbers and evidence to explain it. Keep detailed assumptions in a table or appendix, rather than crowding the headline.

Edit without breaking the system

Type and color

Use Arial throughout. Keep titles near 32 points, body text near 18-22 points and footnotes near 10-12 points. Cover titles are larger. Change theme colors centrally if a different approved brand palette is needed.

Charts and tables

Use the chart source data to change values, categories and series. Each sample chart includes an embedded workbook snapshot. Check totals, periods, units and rounding after any change. Tables are native editable objects, so text and column widths can be adjusted.

Images and diagrams

Use licensed images or client-owned photographs. Record the source and rights. The gallery uses labeled image slots instead of stock photography. Diagram nodes and connectors are native objects. Move a node and inspect its attached links before saving.

Final review

Check every slide at presentation size. Reconcile the source data. Read every heading aloud. Remove unused example text. Confirm that dates, units and assumptions agree. Export a PDF and inspect it on desktop and phone.
